The α and β subunits of the $\alpha\beta$ heterodimer are encoded by separate genes. The α subunit is encoded by the α gene, and the β subunit is encoded by the β gene. The α and β subunits are synthesized as prepro- α and prepro- β , respectively. These precursors are then processed to the mature α and β subunits. The mature subunits then assemble into the $\alpha\beta$ heterodimer. The α subunit is a single chain, while the β subunit is a single chain. The α and β subunits are both 100 amino acids long. The α subunit has a molecular weight of 10 kDa, and the β subunit has a molecular weight of 10 kDa. The α and β subunits are both highly conserved. The α subunit is found in all eukaryotes, and the β subunit is found in all eukaryotes. The α and β subunits are both essential for the function of the $\alpha\beta$ heterodimer. The α subunit is involved in the regulation of the β subunit, and the β subunit is involved in the regulation of the α subunit. The α and β subunits are both involved in the regulation of the $\alpha\beta$ heterodimer. The α and β subunits are both involved in the regulation of the $\alpha\beta$ heterodimer.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation $f(x) = \int_0^x f(t) dt$. It is shown that $f(x)$ is a continuous function and that it satisfies the functional equation $f(x+y) = f(x) + f(y)$. The second part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $g(x)$ defined by the equation $g(x) = \int_0^x g(t) dt$. It is shown that $g(x)$ is a continuous function and that it satisfies the functional equation $g(x+y) = g(x) + g(y)$.

Figures 1 and 2 show the results of the two experiments. The first experiment was designed to test the hypothesis that the effect of the number of stimuli on the response time is a function of the number of stimuli. The results of the first experiment are shown in Figure 1. The response time is plotted against the number of stimuli. The response time increases as the number of stimuli increases. The second experiment was designed to test the hypothesis that the effect of the number of stimuli on the response time is a function of the number of stimuli. The results of the second experiment are shown in Figure 2. The response time is plotted against the number of stimuli. The response time increases as the number of stimuli increases.

Mg^{2+} and Ca^{2+} are essential for the function of the Ca^{2+} pump. The pump is a transmembrane protein that uses energy from ATP to move Ca^{2+} out of the cell. The pump is composed of several subunits, including the Ca^{2+} pump itself, and several regulatory subunits. The pump is located on the plasma membrane of the cell.

NEWARK NUMERICAL DIRECTORY

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Numbers are arranged alphabetically with their descriptions, each description followed by a numerical arrangement of house numbers, street names and street intersections. (Arranged by rotation where no numbers have been assigned.) Abbreviation "N" between the street number and the name signifies "near". "V" after a number signifies that the house, office or store at that number was vacant when canvassed.

Telephone at this number.

After street description indicates odd numbers on right side of street.

Following a householder's name indicates that information has been secured during the canvass that the house is the home of a member of the family, but as the publishers cannot and do not guarantee the correctness of the information, the complete absence of mistakes nor responsibility for errors can be or is assumed, nor can the publishers give further information than that shown.
